IN ADMIRALTY. DEFORE CHIEF JUSTICE SMALE THE "JSCA" CASE. His Lordship took his seat vesterday morn ing at eleven o'clock. Mr. Whyte said that he had received notice only on Thursday evening that a motion was to be made this morning the counsel for the plaintiff in the case of Isca. He supposed this motion was to be made on affidavits, but he had seen no affidavits as yes and beside the rule of court required a notice of the expense of keeping the liarracks in repair on admission, and that many of those whose death is recorded come very fairly under the head of moribunds.—Two deaths are mentioned from of the proceedings. They had asked the defendance of the proceedings. make this motion. The defendants contended the Captain of the vessel was not a necessity, that it was not a necessary expenditure in order to allow the vessel to proceed on her voyage, and the onus to prove this was therefore upon him There was but one way this evidence could obtained and that was by sending a commis sion to Singapore and therefore his present

Mr. Whyte, submitted that the expense of he thought should be avoided if possible. He had made the following proposal to Mr. Pollard which he thought was fair and one that if agreed to would preclude the necessity of a commission. He contended that there was a sucstion of law in this case that could be decided by His Lord ship, it was that the bottomry bond in itself was invalid. Invalid for the reason that the Con tain although he was within easy communica-completing the bond, and which he, Mr. Whyte, claimed he was bound to do. He cited the case of Durante, v Hart and others, in which a similar instance had arisen and although the vessel was at St. Thom a and the owners of the cargo resident in London the bond had been hold in valid. Here the distance was much shorter since communication between Singapore and this place might easily be obtained in at east seven days. He therefore submitted that was a question of law for His Lordship lecide as to the validity of the bond and it was one way of avoiding the incurring of the imnerse expense of sending a commission ing the expense his learned friend was suggestng the expense of two hearing instead of one He submitted that it was not possible for the Captain to know who the owners of the cargo ere. He knew who had chartered the shi but on whose account she had been loaded a Rangoon it could not be expected he should know. It was an occurrence of every day that ships were chartered by parties and laid on by contended that the defendants refusing to admit that the expenditure of the $6000 was a accessity to the ship's proscenting her voyage aid upon him theorus to prove this and he could not do it except by the evidence of parties now in Singapore and this could not be obtained except by a commission. He was not prepared to come into court without any proof and the only proof he could get to rebut the point raised by e defence was in the manner he had stated. Mr. Whyte said he thought his suggestion would dispense with the necessity of a com-misson. If the bond was invalid it went to the root of the whole matter and at once put an end to it, and this was a question of law for His ordship to decide, why get proof upon a case he foundation of which was rotten. Mr. Pollard repeated his former argument The defence would admit nothing but the exenditure of a cum of money and it therefore was with him to prove that this money had been His Lordship thought that the incurring of so
